

Rosette C. Ayunar
BSIT-1A

What are the factors that influence the Filipinos to suffer more negative than positive traits?

There are lots of factors that influence the Filipinos to suffer more negative than positive traits, why is that? It is obvious that ever since in the beginning Filipinos are colonized by different countries including the Spaniards and the Japanese wherein it affects how the Filipino lives and that's the time when the colonization starts. There are lots of positive and negative traits that is stated in the power point of our prof. I believe that because of the colonization, Filipinos tend to adjust and portrayed the same traits which brings the pros and cons of having Filipino traits. For me, the root of it is the "society", we tend to follow what the society want us to portray or what traits should we possessed which leads to the negative traits that we are still practicing nowadays. Next is the "culture", on where we came from. There are lots of practices in a specific culture and it might take forever to enumerate them all. I believe that this traits should be respected by one of us. We also have the "family", it is where the foundation starts by what our parents taught us. More likely, if the family is practicing this negative traits it will automatically be instilled with what their daughter and sons will become.

In conclusion, our "mindset" will always affect how we portray the Filipino traits. We shouldn't practice the negative traits that is still existing nowadays. We should focus to the positive traits and learn to accept changes accordingly. I believe if each of one of us change our perspectives and become respectful and practice humanity, this negative Filipino traits will might lessen and might banish eventually.